Media Education Association

The Media Education Association is well into its third year of existence with some three hundred individual members and over seventy schools and organisations holding institutional membership which includes up to six people in each institution. Consequently MEA is already linked with some five hundred media educationists, mostly located in England and Wales.

Its Executive Committee, elected each year by the members at the Annual General Meeting, meets regularly to oversee the work of MEA. Most tasks are delegated to the officers and sub-committees of the Executive. These working groups are designed to cover not only key educational stages but also the efficient running of the Association.

MEA is supported by a wide range of media education agencies and was funded initially by Ofcom, the UK Film Council and the DfES. But the longer term success of MEA will depend on the size and energy of its educational membership.

Why join the MEA?

The Media Education Association is a grassroots association – set up by media teachers – with membership open to all who are interested in media education.

It exists to promote media education on a national level while also providing support and advice to media educators themselves. Its purpose is to:

- support all those working in media education with young people from primary school age through to further education and beyond
- promote media literacy across and beyond the formal curriculum
- lobby to raise the status of media education and to represent a voice for media and film teachers and others locally, regionally and in the wider community

What the MEA will offer

- A website and online community at www.mediaedassociation.org.uk
- A termly journal PoV
- Regular email newsletters
- A range of benefits, discounts and preview opportunities
- Conferences, regional initiatives and training events
